Fund Manager Commentary

Global equity markets declined in November, while bond markets rallied. European markets were hit particularly hard. Although November saw the first expansionary Purchasing Managers Index flash survey reading for several months, enthusiasm about this was short-lived with concerns about new COVID-19 variant Omicron dominating investors' minds. This coincided with an uneven rise in COVID-related hospitalisations, leading to a divergence in restrictions imposed on activity, with Austria moving to a full lockdown while other countries like the UK only implemented limited tightening of safety measures. The Fund was overweight some badly hit countries like Spain and was also overweight some financially sensitive sectors like Financials and Industrials, leading to a monthly decline of 2.3%, underperforming the FTSE World Europe ex UK benchmark, which declined by 1.7%. This month's top-performing positions included names that could be viewed as lockdown/pandemic beneficiaries, such as Merck, Roche, and PostNL.
